ERRATA

Volume 5, No. 1, Fall 1979.

The Editors apologize to Thelma McCormack for omitting the following lines from her statement "The Professional Ethic and the Spirit of Sexism." On p. 139, the sentence should read:

"But he could not accept the notion that he did not have a monopoly on higher knowledge."

On p. 140, the sentence should read:

"Excellence in the social sciences is dependent on a free society and democratic institutions, not just because it allows us freedom of expression, but because it creates an environment conducive to the critical mind and creative imagination."
