

The Farmer and the Snake

It is my will to bite
when I come to and find myself smothered against your chest.

My fangs ask no questions, simply engage in a dance of stimulation and response.

But you never were a very good dancer, were you Farmer?

I am a question, long and hot against the ground, raveling and unravelling like a sailor's rope —
which font will I coil into today?

It is always a question of what I choose or do not choose to do.

Shoulderlessly, I shrug it off —
the skin you touched, the hewn stone scales you picked at. I leave them behind in the dirt.

There is no me that was handled by you.

I bit off my own tail, made myself
a bleeding sock,

slunk into a hole in the ground.
I froze myself in a bucket, slept in a curlicue of ice crystals.

But still you reach your short and greedy fingers into my den.
I feel the earth falling over me, so I bite down hard

and you yelp like a struck hound.
I expect dashed brains, so my middle contracts
and I make myself small.
How unsweet!
But you forgot what kind of thing I am —

Farmer, you and I were never friends.

No matter how familiar you make yourself with the small red ribbon I keep between the pages of my jaws,
you can never read
what I have written with my body.
